Discovery

AHI Connects: Tanzanian Crafts and Coffee. Meet the artisans of a local glass-blowing workshop that provides disabled people with livelihoods through making and selling handmade jewelry, textiles and more. Continue to a coffee plantation to see how Tanzania's most famous crop is grown and produced.

Tarangire National Park. Tarangire's diverse landscape — grassy plains, flood plains, wetlands and a perennial river — makes the park hospitable to a wide range of animals. You may see some of the continent's largest elephant herds frolicking by the river, lions stretched out under immense baobab trees and zebras out for a graze. From the yellow-collared lovebird, which can fit in your hand, to the martial eagle, Africa's largest bird of prey, some 550 species of birds make their home here.

Ngorongoro Conservation Area. Travel into the Great Rift Valley to the world-famous Ngorongoro Crater and the Oldupai Gorge. Within the green walls of the crater, a natural wonder created 2.5 million years ago after a volcano collapsed, is a lush habitat for lions, leopards, black rhinos, zebras and baboons. Savor a once-in-a-lifetime alfresco lunch on the crater floor. Get a glimpse of anthropological history at the Oldupai Gorge, where eminent archaeologists Louis and Mary Leakey's prehistoric finds contributed to our understanding of the theory of evolution.

Serengeti National Park. Explore one of the most famous wildlife habitats in the world. The Serengeti, derived from the Masai word meaning "endless plain," is home to the Big Five: lions, rhinos, leopards, elephants and Cape buffaloes. Some 1.5 million wildebeest, 300,000 Thomson's gazelle and 200,000 zebra also live here. As you cross the golden grasslands, keep your eyes open for cheetahs, serval cats, hyenas, jackals, giraffes as well as eland, impala, kongoni and other types of antelope.

Enrichment

The Tanzanian People. From the nomadic, red-robed Masai to urban residents, discover the rich culture of the Tanzanian people.

East African Wildlife. During your game drives, learn about Tanzania's wildlife from your expert driver-guide.
